

Manage yourself better, B'wood style

We are a country that thrives on films as a source of entertainment. In the disguise of high entertainment value, a few films sometimes leave a lasting impact on the audiences and deliver important life lessons. To help students draw important management skills from films, the Young Indians Chapter of the city took an interesting session for the students of Class 11. In an era where management students learn from case studies, competitions and real-world experiences, movies such as Dangal, Chak De India and Lakshya offer a practical experience of using a creative approach to engage and bring forth management skills. Anuj Garg and Manish Lalwani

The Sanskaar
Valley
School

used this session to introduce students to management mantras like dream management, believing competencies, short-term and long-term goals. The students were actively engaged to learn and craft their own strategies that are customized to their personality traits for being able to work on their strengths and turn their shortcomings into their forte.